

Every time I have some correspondence with an insurance company home office I am reminded that it is inhabited by a race of people who go to the greatest possible lengths to produce an envelope that is one size too small to accomodate what's expected to go into it.

I smell lurking in the shadowy background the trail of an efficiency expert.

He's the guy who told the company how much it could save in dollars by cutting down on envelope size.

He's a cousin of the guy who told the government during the war that it would be to the nation's advantage to cut two inches off the tails of men's shirts.

But an envelope that won't hold its mail, like a shirt-tail that won't stay in your trousers, is a sin against decency and sound public relations.

And all that dollar-saving small envelope ever got the national companies was to remind the government they were making so much money their income taxes ought to be raised — and they were.

The senate yesterday approved a bill authorizing business houses to quote a uniform price for their products delivered anywhere in the United States.

For years American business has followed what is known as a price basing system absorbing the freight differential between near and far places, in order to quote approximately the same selling price everywhere.

Nothing was wrong with that system — just as nothing is wrong with any system that operates over a period of many years to expand business, increase employment, and maintain a satisfactory profit.

But the lawyers of the United States Supreme Court took it upon themselves to tear up the established pattern of trade and commerce — and outlawed the price basing system.

Now congress has just completed the tedious and unnecessary job of writing a specific bill to protect business against the whimsies of the lawyers of the court.

It's a fair example of what usually happens when opinion colides with an economic fact.

And as long as the people keep on honoring opinions without bothering to study the facts, just so long will government be tied down to additional law-making — at the price of still higher taxes.

Six European Nations Pool Coal, Steel

Paris, June 3 — (AP) — Six European nations agreed today to pool their coal and steel production as one means of unifying Western Europe and of strengthening it economically. They also expressed hope the plan would serve and advance the cause of world peace.

France, Western Germany, Belgium, Italy, Luxembourg and The Netherlands agreed to go along with the pool plan proposed last May 9 by French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman. Great Britain declined to come in, although the British foreign office issued a communiqué in London paying tribute to "the bold and far-reaching importance" of the Schuman proposal. The plan has the blessing of the United States.

"It is the first time in the history of the world," said a French government spokesman of today's agreement, "that countries whose differences have caused so many wars are getting together to create a community of interests which will eliminate the causes of wars."

The six agreeing nations said in a joint communiqué they had "decided to pursue a common action of peace, European solidarity and economic and social progress" by placing the coal and steel production of their respective countries in a common pool under a new high authority.

Britain, although remaining agreed to being kept informed of the progress of negotiations. The British government said it neither wanted to accept in advance nor reject in advance the idea behind the Schuman plan. It objected to the French request for a public declaration of approval in advance of actual discussions of how the pool will work.

Galveston Has 12½ Inches of Rain in 9 Hours

Galveston, Tex., June 3 — (AP) — Torrential rains of 12.45 inches in less than nine hours — flooded this Texas island city today. The entire city was inundated but there was apparently no danger to human life.

Galveston is a city of about 80,000 on the eastern tip of a 30-mile long island connected with the Texas coast by a causeway.

The downpour began about midnight. It was heaviest between 6 and 8 a.m. when 7.35 inches fell.

Storm sewers were unable to carry off the deluge, which flooded into ground floors of business houses and residences alike. Many stores did not open for business because employees were unable to get to work.

All city buses and private cars were stopped by the high water.

McCarthy Hits Senate Probers

Washington, June 3 — (UP) — Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy said today he is about ready to abandon a subcommittee investigating his charges of state department pro-communism.

"In the future, I will probably refuse to give the committee any documents, information or witnesses," the Wisconsin Republicans said. "I will probably develop my cases on the floor of the senate so the information will get to the American people."

McCarthy announced his "break" with the group following a speech inserted in the congressional record in which he denounced the subcommittee for badgering his witnesses. He said they have been subjected to "horse play and abuse."

He quoted Archbold Van Beuren, a wartime official of the office of strategic services, as complaining that subcommittee investigators seemed disinterested in what he had to tell them about the 1945 Amerasia "stolen documents" case.

Subcommittee Chairman Millard E. Tydings, (D-Md.), was not available for comment. But in past battles with McCarthy, he has indicated that he is less than satisfied with the cooperation he is receiving from the Wisconsin Republican.

Mr. Moore and Mr. McKee expressed their appreciation to the many Hope people who have assisted in the establishment of this much needed industry. Both men were especially warm in their appreciation of the assistance given them by Mr. Foster.

The McCarthy speech was an attack upon President Truman, the subcommittee and the state department. He challenged the President to open all loyalty files to congressional inspection and said that failure to do this is defense of "the vested interests" of the Communist party.

The statement overshadowed a running battle over the contents of the classified government documents seized in raids on the offices of the magazine Amerasia in 1945. The documents have been kept secret up to this point.

Six persons were arrested, and two — Editor Philip Jaffe and state department employee Emanuel Larsen — were fined.

Posse Searches for Desperate Armed Trio

Calhoun, Ga., June 3 — (AP) — Weary but wary possemen searched the rain-swept north Georgia hill country today for a red-haired scar-faced woman and her two heavily armed companions.

The trio, wanted for gunfire brushes with officers of two states, left scant clues in their desperate hide-and-seek. One of the three is believed to be wounded.

Armed with a machine gun, a shotgun, and a pistol, the fugitives were described as "very dangerous" by searchers who believe they are trapped within an 18-square-mile area of this rugged heavily timbered section of north Georgia.

Warm ashes of a campfire and the print of a woman's heel in a desolate wooded area provided members of the posse with their strongest clues. A steady rain hampered the search.

Hickenlooper has submitted his candidacy largely on his record. His chief opponent is Earl F. Wisdom, Des Moines attorney. He has accused the senator of atomic bombs and Communists.

Wisdom also charged Hickenlooper has sided power and natural gas interests in his votes in the Senate, and is confused about Iowa's lack of authority over utilities even though the senator formerly was governor of Iowa.

Hickenlooper has submitted his candidacy largely on his record. His chief opponent is Earl F. Wisdom, Des Moines attorney. He has accused the senator of atomic bombs and Communists.

A second but generally inactive opponent of the senator is Harry B. Thompson, Muscatine truck farmer. Thompson defeated Hickenlooper for the Republican nomination for lieutenant governor in 1938, but later withdrew and Hickenlooper was nominated in convention.

Albert J. Loveland, former U.S. undersecretary of state and one of the six candidates for the Democratic senatorial nomination, has been boasting for the Branum plan.

The Art of Conversation Is Really Still Alive — the Real Trouble Is With the People

By HAL BOYLE

New York — (AP) — Certainly you can be an interesting conversationalist.

Yes, you can. Don't mind the snickers of your family and friends. Don't listen to them at all.

In fact, if you are going to be a really interesting conversationalist you can't afford to listen to anybody else. For if you stop talking and listen to another person you cease to be interesting yourself — and the other fellow becomes interesting. You can't put up with a thing like that, can you?

Many people will tell you today that the art of conversation is lost — that it died in the drawing rooms of the Victorian period. Others say that the movies killed it. Still others claim it was lost in the 1930s when television came along and drowned it out.

Actually they are all wrong. The art of conversation is still alive. The real trouble is that many people no longer think it is worth practising. They figure that if they open their mouth an opinion might come out — and today it is more polite not to have opinions. Somebody might not like them.

This desire to avoid saying anything and yet to be in the society of one's fellow man is responsible for the present popularity of cocktail parties. There people can nod at one another and mutter through their martinis or manur through their Manhattans. But if you listen carefully what do you hear? Only bubbles.

Practically everyone who speaks at all today begins by saying: "This is off the record," or else he is running for public office. Even housewives say things like, "Well, I am sure Mrs. Jones hasn't had her windows washed for at least three months."

So the first lesson you have to learn if you are going to be an interesting conversationalist is to throw caution to the winds and come out boldly and say: "Folks this is off the record. Have you noticed how warm it is lately?" Ears will perk up all over the place. Daring always gets attention.

And that is another point: To be an interesting conversationalist you must get attention.

This is indeed more and more of a problem. Suppose you are visiting friends, and there somebody is sitting glued before a television set with dead sardines in their mouths and glasses of watered red-eye in their hands.

You can't very well walk over

Adkins Quits Employment Security Post

Little Rock, June 3 — (GP) — For Gov. Homer M. Adkins is quitting his $8,000 a year job as administrator of the state employment security division.

He gave no reason in a letter yesterday to Governor McMath in which he resigned, effective June 15.

He wrote McMath that "I want you to know I shall be glad to do anything I can to assist you in your campaign for a second term which you so justly deserve." McMath is opposed for renomination by former Gov. Ben Laney and four others.

Adkins, who was governor in 1941-45, assisted McMath in his first campaign for governor two years ago. He was named ESD administrator early in 1949.

There was no announcement of a successor to Adkins. Roland M. Shelton is assistant administrator.

Adkins has business interests in Little Rock and a farm near Mav-

Highway Dept. May Have to Build Truck Routes

Little Rock, June 3 — (AP) — The Arkansas highway department is confronted with the possibility that it may have to assume full maintenance for truck routes through cities.

A Little Rock delegation yesterday asked the highway commission to take over truck routes through Little Rock. The delegation said the city was unable to pay half the cost as it now does.

Highway Director J. C. Baker said legally it is the state's responsibility to assume all maintenance cost on such routes. He said other cities probably will ask for a similar arrangement if the Little Rock request is granted.

The commission directed Baker and Chief Highway Engineer Alf Johnson to study the matter.

Budget Deficit Is Less Than Expected

Washington, June 3 — (AP) — The federal government may wind up the 1950 fiscal year some $1,400,000 less in the red than the administration had forecast only six weeks ago.

There is even an outside chance that the treasury will find itself better off by close to $2,000,000.

The budget deficit for the 12-month period ending the 30th of this month appears likely now to stay well below $4,000,000,000 — a startling 26 per cent improvement over the $5,400,000, deficit predicted by the budget bureau on April 2.

This change in the outlook was indicated by the trend of official figures and confirmed by officials who cannot be named but who have excellent information on the situation.

They ascribed the new development to the fact that government spending is lagging far behind estimates, while tax revenues are running moderately above April expectations.

As of May 31 — when only one month left of this fiscal year — there were signs that the 12-month spending figure alone might fall a whopping $1,400,000,000 below the April 20 estimate of $4,200,000. That last total was itself a sharp cut from President Truman's January prediction that $43,800,000 would be spent this year.

Officials said the April spending guess is virtually certain to prove an overestimate of at least $1,000,000.

No charges were filed.

Tax Writers Again Warned by Truman

Washington, June 3 — (AP) — House members said today President Truman has warned congressional tax writers once again that he will veto any bill which cuts excise taxes without making up the revenue loss to the government.

The President's restatement of his position underlined the dilemma confronting the house ways and means committee.

The committee has approved excise cuts far in excess of those recommended by Mr. Truman, but its efforts to find new ways of raising revenue thus far have fallen hundreds of millions of dollars short of striking a balance.

The committee decided yesterday to stand fast on excise slashes totaling about $1,075,000,000, almost double the $855,000,000 limit Mr. Truman proposed.

It gave final approval to cuts affecting furs, jewelry, luggage, toilet preparations, movie and other tickets, and some tobaccos. It did back away somewhat on a previously approved $19,000,000 annual tax slash for night club patrons.

One top committee member, asking not to be identified, told newsmen the situation now is that the bill will be vetoed unless higher taxes are put on corporations.

The President suggested that the corporation income tax rate be boosted from 33 per cent to 42 per cent, for a $650,000,000 increase.

The committee now is about $760,000,000 shy of finding enough revenue to offset its big excise cut. Nobody is discussing any higher levies on individual incomes.

Mr. Truman's new warnings of a veto was relayed to members of the ways and means committee by congressional leaders who called at the White House.

The committee began yesterday a review of its previous tentative approval of excise cuts totaling $1,80,000,000. It covered items accounting for $525,000,000 of the cut, and was to trim down the side of the slash by only $5,000,000 net.

Women Drivers
Out Is Boys'
State Proposal

Little Rock, June 2 — (AP) — Women may be forbidden to drive automobiles by legislative act here today.

Not really, of course, but such a proposal is before the Arkansas Boys state legislature at its one-day session.

The boys state, a study in government for high school juniors, is winding up its week's existence at nearby Camp Robinson.

Another proposal before the young legislators would ban political third parties hereafter in boys state. That one grows out of a partly-successful revolt earlier this week against the two regularly-established parties.

Other bills would:

Direct the state to take over and operate all liquor stores.

Forbid anyone to practice a healing art without having the degree of doctor of medicine or doctor of dental surgery from a recognized four-year institution (and would provide severe penitentiary sentences for violations.)

Have sexual education taught to senior students in all state-owned secondary schools.

Dr. Brann to Head Research
Program

Fayetteville, June 2 — (AP) — Dr. Paul Brann has been selected to direct an expanded program of business and economic research by the University of Arkansas college of Business Administration.

Dean Paul W. Milam announced today Dr. Brann's appointment as associate director of the college's bureau of business and economic research, effective on July 1. He will succeed Professor John Kane, who has served for the past year as acting associate director and will return to full-time teaching duties.

Since his appointment to the University staff in 1944, Dr. Brann has conducted research on numerous problems affecting the economic development of the state, and during the past year he has served as head of the economics division of the University's institute of science and technology.

Dr. Brann is a native of Swifton Ark. He holds a bachelor's degree from Arkansas State college and the M. A. and the P. H. D. degrees from the University of Virginia.

Under Dr. Brann's guidance, the bureau of business and economic research will undertake individual studies in a long-range program designed to assist in raising the level income of the people of Arkansas.

One of the first major studies, already under way, involves a comparison of the Arkansas tax system with those of neighboring states.

Senators
Get Around
a Ruling

By JAMES MARLOW

Washington, June 3 — (AP) — The senate has a long-standing rule: No senator can call another senator a liar.

Every senator knows the rule. But it must have irked Senator Richard P. Ernst, Kentucky Republican, pretty badly one day.

The day was March 14, 1925. He was having an argument with another senator.

Under the rule Ernst couldn't call his opponent a liar. But when the other man sat down, Ernst got up and said:

"I wish to know if there be any way under the rules of the senate whereby I can, without breaking those rules and without offending the senators about me, call a fellow member a willful, malicious and wicked liar? Is there any way of doing that?"

So, in spite of the rule, Ernst squeezed around it and got his point across. He was promptly ordered to sit down.

The rule which stopped him from calling the other senator a liar outright, is rule No. 19 and it says:

"No senator in debate shall directly or indirectly, by any form of words, impute to another senator or other senators any conduct or motive unworthy or unbecoming a senator."

So, even though a senator may know one of his colleagues is lying or that his statements are unfair and spring from the basest motives, he can't get up in the senate and say so.

There's something else which senators have in their favor, and it's a mighty big favor. It's called "congressional immunity" and it means:

"No matter how badly or unjustly he may have ruined an ordinary citizen's reputation, a senator cannot be sued for damages for anything he says so long as he says it on the senate floor.

This kind of set up — freedom from suit outside the senate for what he says in the senate and freedom from real criticism inside the senate by his fellow-senators — gives any senator gigantic advantage in any dispute with anyone outside the senate.

It was those two things which Mrs. Margaret Chafee Smith, Maine Republican, had in mind this week when she made a Senate speech that got national attention:

"...do not like the way the Senate has been made a rendezvous for vilification for selfish political gain at the sacrifice of individual reputations and national unity."

"I am not proud of the way we smother outsiders from the floor of the Senate and hide behind the cloak of congressional immunity and still place ourselves beyond criticism on the floor of the Senate."

While she spoke Senator McCarthy, Wisconsin Republican, sat behind her, saying nothing. Although she never mentioned his name, Mrs. Smith's speech has been interpreted as aimed at McCarthy.

McCarthy has made many charges of pro-communism against state department workers and has even said in congress that Owen Lattimore, Far Eastern expert, was the "top Soviet agent in this country."

Although Lattimore has challenged him to make the "Soviet agent" charge in public, McCarthy has done so, nor has he shown any signs of quitting.

On May 3 Senator Scott Lucas of Illinois, leader of the Democrats in the Senate, got up to read a statement from the state department, denying McCarthy charges of communism.

It was a long statement. Finally Lucas reached the following sentence: "... There is no shred of truth to the senator's (McCarthy) flat statement."

Before he could finish the sentence, Lucas was interrupted by the senator's Republican leader, Wherry of Nebraska, who said by merely reading this part of the statement Lucas was, in effect, calling McCarthy a liar and so has violating rule 19.

Lucas had to sit down.

Hundred Named to Serve on Committee

Little Rock, June 2 — (UP) — More than a hundred leading Arkansans have been named to serve on nine sub-committees of the state's "little Hoover commission."

The sub-committees will be charged specifically with determining how the state can operate more efficiently and more economically in each department.

Gov. Sid McMath told the commission yesterday that he wanted their reports early so the recommendations could be put into effect by executive order if possible.

He said that most of the suggestions made would be submitted to the legislature, but that he would make them effective if it were within his power.

"The purpose of your work is not to serve the political advantage of anyone," he said. "Your duty is to give us greater efficiency in government."

The new subcommittees are: conservation and development; charitable and correctional institutions; law enforcement and public safety; personnel management; financial management; public works; educational services, regulatory and examining boards; and health and welfare.

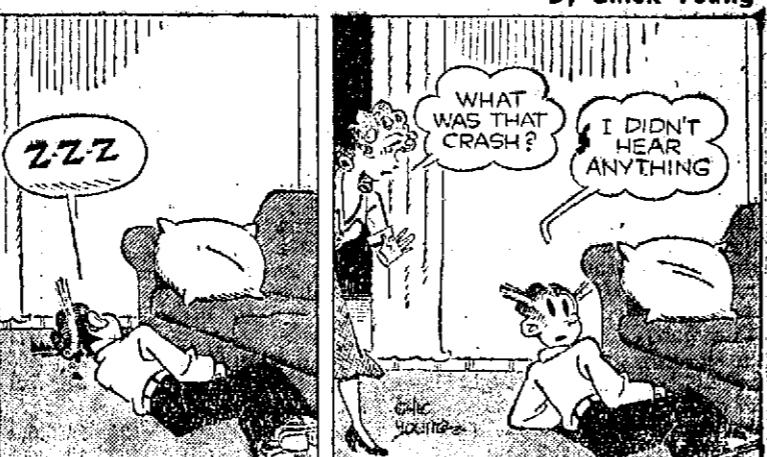

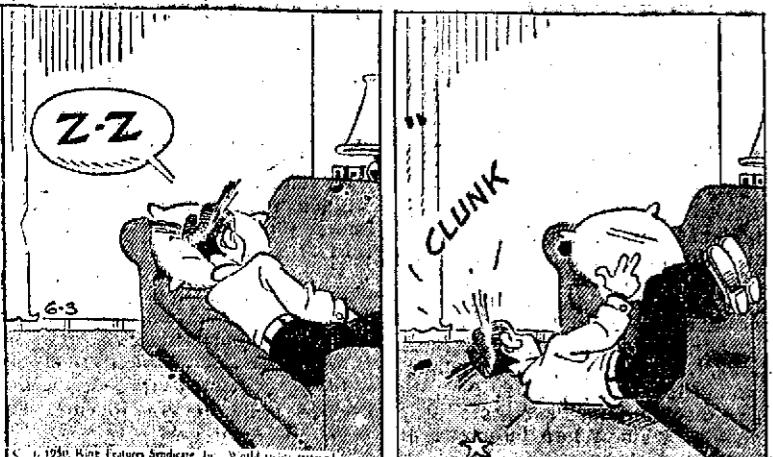

Jack Strickland has returned from a visit in San Antonio, Tex.

Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Herndon and son, Billy Bob of Fort Smith were Friday night guests of Mr. and Mrs. R. V. Herndon, Sr. enroute to Pine Bluff. Billy Bob remained in Hope for a visit.

Soldier Is Convicted of Rape

San Francisco, June 2 — (AP) — An all-male federal jury convicted Sgt. Lyle Buswell of the rape slaying of attractive Waf S. Fairy Decker, 44, but recommended that he be spared from the death penalty.

The verdict, after more than six hours deliberation last night left some doubt whether the burly Ruland, Vt., soldier would escape death in the San Quentin penitentiary gas chamber.

Federal Judge Louis Goodman said he was puzzled at the wording of the verdict. After the jury was excused he expressed doubt as to the validity of the recommendation.

Specifically the jurors found the 33-year-old airman guilty of second degree murder, murder committed during rape, and rape. To the last two, the jurors added the phrase "without capital punishment."

The penalty for rape on a military reservation is death unless the government stipulates to a lesser punishment. The government had asked for the death penalty.

Buswell showed no emotion as the verdicts were read finding him guilty on each count, but as he was being led from the courtroom he was heard telling his attorney, James E. Burns, "Well, you did everything you could."

Buswell admitted choking the woman to death at the Hamilton air base 25 miles north of San Francisco on March 25. But he steadfastly denied raping her. He said she submitted voluntarily and that afterwards she laughed at him and he choked her on an "impulse."

At the time, he testified, he had been on a "big drunk" because he had been ordered overseas.

Judge Goodman announced he would sentence Buswell Monday.

At that time Burns said he would file a motion for a new trial.

In court for the final day of the trial was Buswell's father, Harry Buswell of Springfield, Vt. He refused to comment on the trial but said his son had always been a good boy and must have been upset at the prospect of going overseas.
